Words of Integration & Guidance

By Rev. Ian Lawton

Something incredible happened to a group of first-century Jews at the time that is known as Pentecost. The miracle was not a miracle of speaking in tongues. The miracle was that everyone present heard in a way that made sense to them. They “got it” simultaneously. They caught the vision that earlier Hebrew Prophets had spoken about. It was a vision of unity. The incredible thing is that people of many cultures heard and understood the vision in their own way. They were all one. They were all together, by themselves. Today we gather in spiritual community. We are from a number of different backgrounds. We use different language to describe the mystery that sources our joy. Some of us take more of a left-brain approach – linear and logical. Some of us take a more right-brain approach, creative and open-ended. The miracle won't be conformity. The miracle will be a shared vision that finds strength in diversity.
